This is the cause for many remotes not being able to learn Dish codes. Recommended remotes are below It is similar to All for One remotes and it manufactured by the same company but this version has a backlit keypad. If you really want to customize these remotes, build or buy a JP1 cable and download your own files to these remotes. These are very powerful and very easily configured via a PC and the Harmony website.

Just input the make and model of your device and the correct codes are automatically identified. The correct inputs are automatically selected on all devices through a setup wizard. A powerful and easy remote. There are discussion forums on everything related to remote controls. A large number of remotes have been released in the past year. Click here for an excellent table comparing the models. If you can't get your Dish remote to control another device, it's probably because the Dish remote is missing the codes. This Acrobat file is also available on the Dish Network website. Simply start over again. The light will blink off after each digit is entered and then return to a steady light. If the code entered is valid for the remote, the mode light flashes three times. Simply start over. If the code entered is valid for the remote, the mode light flashes three times. Some codes may provide partial functions or respond differently than the button's titled function. Try the other codes listed for that device until you find one that offers more complete functionality. If several codes power on the device, try all of the buttons for each code to find which one best controls all of the functions of the device. The first digit indicates the device type. If the code you entered is valid for your remote, the mode light will blink 3 times. If the code is correct, the device should turn off. Occasionally the Power button may work when other buttons do not. Write all of the codes you programmed on to the sticker that came with your satellite receiver and apply the sticker to the inside of the remote battery cover. If you have tried all of the device codes without success, try using the following Power Scan procedure. When this happens, try some other functions to make sure you have the correct code. Occasionally the Power button may work when other buttons do not. The mode light will start flashing slowly. The mode light will stop flashing and stay lit.

The Down arrow button scans backward and the Up arrow button scans forward. If the code is valid for your remote, the mode light will blink 3 times. Occasionally the Power button may work when others do not. The scan will resume from the last code stored. The remote control may not control some device models. Here are some simple tips before you begin. This will give you quicker and more consistent results. Manually turn on the device you are trying to program before you begin the Power Scan. If the scan powers the device off, but does not give full function, restart scan mode and continue. For example, there are dozens of RCA TV codes. Not all devices are supported, and many will only give you basic functions. If performing the Power Scan correctly then it should not take more than six minutes to find the code. Simply start over again. There will be a pause between the flash sequences for the digits. A quick flash indicates zero. Otherwise, you may need to reprogram these codes into the remote. Switching to a different address is necessary if you have 2 satellite receivers or if your neighbor's receiver is set on the same remote address and they are changing your channels. The SAT mode light will stop flashing and stay lit. If you entered a valid remote address, the SAT mode light will blink 3 times. If not, power the satellite receiver off and wait 15 seconds. This will bring up the "Important System Information" menu. The screen will update and the "remote address" listed on the screen will change to the new remote address of the remote control. Specifically there is no address button on the remote for changing the address if you have multiple receivers. The new process is pretty simple, but not intuitive. I have tried everything you suggest. Is there any way I can control both receivers with the same dish remote. All my electronic equipment is in an "equipment closet" out of site of the tv's and other equipment. Most of my equipment is setup with an IR setup.

In my bedroom where I am setting up my second tv I don't have the IR setup capability. Is there any way the remote will be able to control these two receivers separately without a "line of site" operation. Thanks in advance for your expertise. The remote does not change any channels or control my television anymore. I have changed the batteries 2X and the only time the buttons on top light up is if I take the batteries out and put them back in. Not sure what else to do. Can you help me with this please LG codes aren't listed in the receiver manual nor on the Dish web site. The problem is that when I try to set the receiver to use that code 676, the message "That code is not in the database" is returned. The receiver has the current software version. Is there a way to force an upgrade of the receiver's database, or to program that code into the receiver. Also, would the code databases be the same in both models DP301 and 311. Thanks for the help. But I just got ahold of an older year 2000 AIWA Stereo CD Player, I like it cause it has AUX for my TV. I am surprised my Dish Net remote does not control it, at all, even with Power Scan. I have the Echostar receiver, model 3700, Reg. ID 005. The codes 627 and 659 work with the exception of volume and power. PLS. help if possible. Thanks, Dean This is the cause for many remotes not being able to learn Dish codes. Recommended remotes are below" I'm sure other remotes support this as well; 57 kHz is not that uncommon. The code scan also did not work. According to everything I've read will not duplicate the function of the Dish TV2 remote. I think there is a lot more at work here than just a remote that will output 57Khz or greater. It is not an RF signal. You're getting the two confused. There is no remote that will control a Dish receiver directly over RF.

If you want multiroom control from a universal remote, you'll need to get one that communicates with its own base station via RF; the remotes base station would control the dish network receiver via IR. These instructions are for adding IR receiving capability to Dish receivers that do not have it. You are absolutely correct, it was my misinterpretation. I was ONLY talking about the RF capability for a TV2 Dish remote which operates a Dish DVR or other UHF capable Dish receiver from another room. This is a direct RF operation, no IR involved although the same remote has IR capability also to operate certain components in the remote location. Not to be confused with RF remotes that transmit signal via RF and then has an RF receiver that converts the signal back to IR to operate components in another room. I used to have a learning remote controlling it, but that was before I got Dish, plus it broke. I will go get another one if need be, but it would be nice if the dish remote could control that too. Thank you very much. My TV has to go into game mode for me to play my XBOX and there is no Game mode on the Dish remote. How do I put it into game mode The guide, info, menu etc. I even tried to change the channel from the box and that did not work either. I put new batteries, just in case,.. no luck Can you help me Can I use a regular universal remote to change the channel on my dish network tv Hope this works for others with the Westinghouse brand. Do you know where I could find a list of codes for something like that I have the Dish network system 625 with 5.0 IR remote. I have tried all the codes in the manual and on their website. Also have tried the scan method with no luck. Do you know of the code to use Thank you. Is their remote with the correct button When you say "Address" bottom what do you mean. I did try to do the opposite, program my Dish Remote to control my new Sony LCD HDTV with no results either. Help please Viewing Distance vs. Resolution.

All remotes are fully sanitized at time of shipment. Stay Safe! It has the quality you trust from Dish Network. This remote needs no programming to control the unit it was provided with, has no codes to enter, and has all the functions needed to control your unit with ease. It is easy, pull it out of the professional packaging, insert new batteries, sit back and watch it work. And we are not talking about just putting new batteries in. All units we sell are in stock, and promptly ship the same or next day. All remote controls are thoroughly tested and professionally packaged. Your information is never sold and is never transferred to anyone. It is only used for the purpose of promptly delivering a quality product to your doorstep. Our experience in listening to our clients is they are of inferior quality, and many times do not function the same as an original OEM branded replacement remote control. Many clients come to us after their recent generic purchase has failed, or does not operate the way the original replacement did. Some report having to enter codes to program the remote to function properly. There are many clever ways these are marketed. Infra Red light cannot be seen with the naked eye. So not seeing this infra red light has no indication as to whether the remote is functioning properly or not. Good News! Infra red light be seen with a smart phone in the selfie mode. Just point it at the smart phone in selfie mode, and press buttons. You should see a flash of infra red light as the buttons are depressed on the remote control. This means the remote is functioning. If the infra red light stays on constantly, or never comes on, the remote is defective. See more in the troubleshooting link at the top of the page. However, if you need help, let us know. We will attempt to find the manual for your specific manual and email it to you if needed. This is a free service we provide to our clients. It will not need any additional codes or programming for that.

However, lets say you are replacing a TV remote. It will operate the TV without a need for programming, but it may offer an option to control additional devices such DVD, or Audio unit it was not supplied with. This is where you would need an operations manual that gives programming instructions with codes. Not for the unit it was asupplied with, but for the convienance of controlling other devices you may own with a single remote control. Maybe you still need our expertese to help you find the right remote, or determine whether your controller has a problem. Visit our troubleshooting link above, that answers the vast majority of problems you may have. If you still need help, click on contact us and leave us a message. We generally answer all messages the same or next day. You can call or text us as well, the number is at the bottom of the page. Please leave a message if we we do not answer. We will return your call. Whether you need help troubleshooting, codes, programming or a manual, it is very helpful if you provide us with both the model number on your remote control, and the model number of the unit it controls. Email is always best too. We can deliver manuals, links to the product you are looking for, or links to other sites on the web if we do not have the product you need. That is right, if we do not have the remote you are looking for, we will help you find it! See the difference we can make with your purchase from RemoteControlDepot.com. This provides great causes with the benefit of an easy practical, fund raising opportunity. We employ foster children, mentally challenged individuals, as well as those recovering from substance abuse. Keeping jobs right here in the USA, and hiring those who benefit the most has always been our vision. By refurbishing, and remarketing these remotes, we keep our dollars right here in the USA.
